

No sustainability without Integrity

Promoting integrity for good water governance is not just about fighting corruption , but about (re) building trust

WIN Water Integrity Network
Fighting corruption in water worldwide

1/27/2015

WIN's vision

A world with equitable and sustained access to water and a clean environment, which is no longer threatened by corruption, greed, dishonesty and willful malpractice.

Increasing integrity levels is key for sector performance in all countries

- Awareness about corruption in its different forms while considering specific cultural contexts and languages
- More can be done to contain or prevent malpractice by building alliances and coalitions among stakeholders in public and private sectors as well as civil society
- There are various tools that can help to address integrity issues and risks professionally
- Promoting integrity should be normal professional practice

Core values

- Transparency
- Accountability
- Integrity
- Participation

BUT HOW ARE THESE BEING INTERPRETED OR EVEN MANIPULATED? ARE THE RULES CLEAR AND ARE THEY APPLIED?

Some suggestions to the OSCE Economic and Environmental Forum

- Encourage that OSCE countries undertake water integrity scans and studies
- Identify knowledge and capacity building networks and educational institutions that can support multi stakeholder processes
- Promote water integrity tools and methodologies to diagnose corruption and to improve integrity and governance in the water sector
- Promote the development of codes of conduct among stakeholders
