Information Exchange on the OSCE Code of Conduct on Politico-Military Aspects of Security 2007

1. Appropriate measures to prevent and combat terrorism, in particular participation in international agreements to that end:

Malta has become party to thirteen international treaties of the United Nations and to three Council of Europe Conventions relating to various aspects of the problem of international terrorism. Before the tragic events of 11th September 2001, Malta was already party to six of these Conventions, and afterwards Malta immediately took the necessary action to join other States and ratified/acceded to six other Conventions related to terrorism all at the same time. Malta became party to all the Conventions relating to various aspects of the problem of international terrorism in 2003, by acceding to the Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material. In addition to the above, on 15th September 2005, Malta signed the International Convention for the Suppression of Acts of Nuclear Terrorism.

Malta has also prepared a report to the United Nations Security Council Committee on Counter Terrorism established pursuant to paragraph 6 of Security Council Resolution 1373 (2001). This report clearly states the steps which the Maltese Government has been taking or is in the process of taking in order to implement resolution 1373(2001). The Government of Malta submitted its first report to the Security Council Committee on Counter-Terrorism (CTC) on the 21st December 2001. Another report was prepared on the same matter and was submitted to the CTC on 11th July 2002; and in 2005, the latest report on this matter was also submitted to the CTC.

Furthermore Malta has also compiled a report pursuant to paragraphs 6 and 12 of resolution 1455 (2003).

b. Accession to and participation in other multilateral and bilateral agreements or measures undertaken to prevent and combat terrorist activities:

i) Multilateral Agreements

Malta is also party to:

- The European Convention on Extradition [CETS NO. 024]
- The Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Extradition [CETS NO. 086]
- The Second Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Extradition [CETS NO. 098]
- The Convention on Laundering, Search, Seizure and Confiscation of the Proceeds from Crime [CETS NO. 141]
- The European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters [CETS NO. 141]

- Protocol amending the European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism [CETS NO. 190]

Malta has also signed with a view to ratify in the near future:

- The Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters [CETS NO. 099]
- The Second Additional Protocol to the European Convention on Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters [CETS NO. 182]

ii) Bilateral Agreements

Malta also concluded a number of bilateral agreements with other States relating to co-operation in the fight against drugs and organised crime. In fact Malta has concluded bilateral agreements on the matter with Albania, Bulgaria, China, Cyprus, Egypt, France, Greece, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Libya, Romania, Russia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Tunisia, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States of America. Malta also signed a Police Cooperation agreement with South Africa which also covers organised crime, illicit trafficking of drugs, firearms, explosives and poisonous substances.

Furthermore Malta has succeeded to the Extradition Treaties signed by Great Britain and extended to Malta prior to 1964 (the year when Malta became independent). Among these (apart from those with European countries which have been superseded since Malta's ratification of the European Convention on Extradition) there are treaties with the U.S.A, Panama, Ecuador, Guatemala, Liberia, Nicaragua, Paraguay, Peru, San Marino, Thailand, Uruguay, Tunisia, Chile, Argentina, Liberia, Mexico, and Cuba. Any changes effected in these treaties after 1964 do not bind Malta. Similarly, Malta is not bound by any extradition treaties signed by Britain after 1964.

On 19th March 1996, Malta signed and ratified the European Convention on Extradition (1957) - a multilateral Convention, which governs extradition between the Contracting Parties thereto. This Convention entered into force for Malta on the 17th June 1996. According to Article 28 of the Convention (Relations between this Convention and bilateral agreements), the provisions of the European Convention on Extradition supersede and take precedence over the provisions of any bilateral extradition Treaties, Conventions or Agreements which were previously concluded between any two Contracting Parties to this Convention.

c. National measures, to include pertinent legislation, taken to implement the international agreements, conventions and protocols cited above:

On a national level several legal measures have been taken to implement the provisions of international agreements, conventions and protocols cited above. In 2003 the Criminal Code was amended to give the Attorney General power to authorise the Police and Customs authorities, where appropriate, to allow controlled deliveries of dangerous substances and to carry out joint investigations between Maltese and non-Maltese authorities (article 433E of the Criminal Code) in criminal matters.

On 6th June 2005, Act. No. VI adds the following title to the Criminal Code: "Of Acts of Terrorism, Funding of Terrorism and Ancillary Offences". Whereby an "act of terrorism" means any act listed in sub article (2), committed wilfully, which may seriously damage a country or an international organization where committed with the aim of: (a) seriously intimidating a population, or; (b) unduly compelling a Government or; international organization to perform or abstain from performing any act, or; (c) seriously destabilising or destroying the fundamental political, constitutional, economic or social structures of a country or an international organization”. Act. No. VI of 2005 may be referred to at the following internet address: <http://www.doi.gov.mt/EN/parliamentacts/2005/Act%20VI.pdf>

Moreover, under Article 83 of the Criminal Code, it is a crime for any person to establish, maintain or belong to any association of persons who are organised and trained or organised and equipped for the purpose of enabling them to be employed for the use or display of physical force in promoting any political object.

In addition to the above, under Article 83A of the Criminal Code, it is also a crime for any person to promote, constitute, organise or finance an organisation of two or more persons with a view to commit criminal offences liable to the punishment of imprisonment for a term of four years or more and the mere fact of belonging to such an organisation is a crime in itself with an aggravation of the punishment where the number of persons in the organisation is ten or more. Where the person found guilty is the director, manager, secretary or other principal officer of a body corporate or is a person having a power of representation of such a body or having an authority to exercise control within that body and the offence was committed for the benefit, in whole or in part, of that body corporate, the person so found guilty shall be deemed to be vested with the legal representation of the same body corporate which itself shall be criminally liable to pecuniary penalties ranging from 10,000 Maltese Liri (25,000 Euro) to 500,000 Maltese Liri (1,250,000 Euro) depending on the nature of the offence committed. Under article 83A (5) of the Criminal Code, moreover, the relevant criminal action may be prosecuted in Malta notwithstanding that the organisation of persons is based or pursues its criminal activities outside Malta.

Security Council Resolutions are also implemented, and thus become enforceable on a domestic level, through Legal Notices issued under Section 3(1) of the National Interest (Enabling Powers) Act (Cap 365, Laws of Malta). Resolutions 1267 (1999), 1333 (2000) and Resolution 1390 (2002) were implemented through Legal Notice 214 of 1999, as amended by Legal Notices 22 of 2001, and 72 and 212 of 2002.

Section 4(1) of LN 214 of 1999 prohibits Maltese citizens and persons present in Malta from withdrawing or attempting to withdraw or using or attempting to use any funds or other financial resources owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by the Taliban, or by any undertaking owned or controlled by the Taliban, saving the exceptions provided in the said Security Council Resolutions. The same section also prohibits the direct or indirect payment or attempt thereof, to or for the benefit of the Taliban or any undertaking owned or controlled, directly or indirectly by the Taliban, except as may be authorised by the Committee established in terms of paragraph 6 of Security Council Resolution 1267 (1999) on a case by case basis on the grounds of humanitarian need.

Similarly, section 4(5) of the said Legal Notice makes provision for the prohibition of transfer of funds or financial resources. Indeed this section reads as follows:

“Notwithstanding any other law, no citizen of Malta and no person in Malta shall, whether directly or indirectly, transfer any funds or other financial resources ... [for] the benefit of Osama bin Laden, his associates or any entities owned or controlled, directly or indirectly, by Osama bin Laden or individuals and entities associated with him, including the Al-Qaida organisation.”

The said Legal Notice also goes beyond funds and financial resources. Section 4(6) imposes an arms embargo and prohibits the sale, supply or transfer of technical advice, assistance or training related to military activities, to individuals, groups, undertakings or entities as designated by the Committee established in terms of paragraph 6 of Resolution 1267 (1999).

The Arms Act (Chapter 480 of the Laws of Malta) and Explosives Ordinance (Chapter 33 of the Laws of Malta) cover offences that are also related to the offences of terrorism.

Malta has also set up a regime for the control of exports of dual use items and military equipment, as well as for the control of related technology. The Dual Use Items (Export Control) Regulations of 2004 and the Military Equipment (Export Control) Regulations 2002 are additional legal tools to fight terrorism.

Together with these, one may also add the Money Laundering Act (Chapter 373 of the Laws of Malta) and the regulations made there-under, the Immigration Act (Chapter 217 of the Laws of Malta), the Extradition Act (Chapter 276 of the Laws of Malta), the Customs Ordinance (Chapter 37 of the Laws of Malta) and the Refugees Act (Chapter 420 of the Laws of Malta)¹.

Malta has a Europol and Eurojust mandate and as such directly participates in the fight against organised crime following obligations emanating from the respective agreements.

d. Information on national efforts to prevent and combat terrorism, including appropriate information on legislation beyond United Nations Conventions and Protocols (e.g. pertaining to financing of terrorist groups):

As highlighted above, in order to implement the sanctions or measures adopted by the United Nations Security Council on the freezing of funds, the Maltese legislator has adopted the National Interest (Enabling Powers) Act of 1993. This Act envisages that these sanctions and measures are to be published in the Government Gazette. Upon such publication the measures enjoy the force of law. These resolutions contain a list of persons or entities in respect of whom financial sanctions or other restrictive measures have been imposed. These lists are continuously updated and passed to the Malta Financial Services Authority (MFSA), the single unified regulator for financial services in Malta. In turn the MFSA places the updated lists on its website for ease of reference.

The MFSA has directed its licence holders by means of a circular to verify their records for the names of individuals and organisations indicated in the Government Notices and for any information, transaction or connection whatsoever relating to the individuals and organisations in question.

Customs also play an important role in preventing and suppressing the financing of terrorist acts as it controls out-going and incoming cash carried by departing and arriving passengers.

Furthermore new provisions and amendments for the freezing of funds have been added to the Maltese Criminal Code (Chapter 9 of the Laws of Malta) by virtue of Act III of 2002, and also under the Prevention of Money Laundering Act (Chapter 373 of the Laws of Malta). The provisions of the latter Act have been modelled on the requisites of the relevant Financial Action Task Force (FATF) 40- Recommendations.

In addition to the above, a Contact Point for Terrorism Intelligence within the Malta Security Service was set-up.

In November 2006 the Ministry for Justice and Home Affairs appointed a National Counter Terrorism Coordinator (NCTC). The appointed person ensures cooperation amongst key players in the fight against terrorism both operational and in the adoption of policies. This person is also the National Correspondent to Eurojust on terrorism issues.

For the prevention of the phenomenon of Home-grown Terrorism, in 2007 the NCTC embarked on a long term project to promote dialogue with influential Muslim leaders on the Island.

Since 2006 the Malta Security Service has also appointed a liaison officer to deal with the Financial Intelligence and Analysis Unit (FIAU)

e. Roles and missions of armed and security forces in preventing and combating terrorism:

The Maltese law enforcement agencies are fully committed to prevent the commission of terrorist acts as such, and sharing of intelligence with other foreign services on bilateral or multilateral basis is continuous.

Malta has agreed to disseminate any relevant information which in some way may be related to terrorist acts. In fact during the Regional Liaison Intelligence Officers meeting held in Oslo, Norway in November 2001, it was agreed that all information which is available to Customs and which, in the opinion of the holding officer, may in any way be relative to terrorist acts, is transmitted to the RILO office in the region through the Customs Enforcement Network (CEN) of the World Customs Organisation.

Customs stations have also been alerted of the possibility of illicit movement of weapons and hazardous materials, and equipment for the detection of such illicit activity is at the disposal not only of certain Customs stations but also of roving enforcement units. Recent additions to this equipment consist of X-Ray machines (one of them mobile) for detecting weapons, explosives etc., and further additions to such equipment is envisaged for the future.

Furthermore, measures are also taken to ensure border controls, considering that Malta is an island situated in a small, yet extremely busy sea. The Armed Forces of Malta units carry out continuous surface patrolling and frequent aerial surveillance both inshore and offshore. The Armed Forces of Malta is also responsible for control of merchant shipping entering and leaving the Grand Harbour.

The Immigration Service is also involved in preventing movement of terrorists. A computerised system of port entries contains the details of known terrorists who are brought to the notice of the Public Service in Malta. Each and every arriving passenger is checked against this system to secure the detection and arrest of fugitive terrorists, when these are discovered. New Maltese passports with the most sophisticated security features, which include digitised photographs, have been introduced in Malta. These passports are extremely difficult to forge.

The Malta Police is responsible for Immigration and State Security functions at the Airport, and the maintenance of public law and order. Immigration and Security Police are responsible for the checking of passengers for identification of possible terrorist suspects and their arrests. The Police Special Assignment Groups (SAG) also provides an armed force of anti-terrorist trained men to participate in any action requiring their intervention. Moreover, the Anti-Terrorism Unit has been set up within the International Relations Unit for the prevention and investigation of acts of terrorism and related activities.

The Malta International Airport plc (MIA) has the responsibility of providing personnel for the screening of passengers, hand luggage, and hold baggage at the airport. As MIA plc is also a security organisation, it has the responsibility of protecting its property, and in the events of findings that indicate a possible threat to aviation security, they are responsible to notify the Manager Airport Security, Armed Forces of Malta or the Police.

Furthermore recently Malta has signed a co-operation agreement with Europol, which would enhance exchange of operational information. And, customs information networks, which of course include the Maltese Customs Administration, have been placed at the disposal of Anti-Terrorist Units worldwide.

(Paragraph 6)

2. National planning and decision-making process – including the role of the Parliament and the Ministries – for the determination/approval of:

a. The Military Posture

The Prime Minister of Malta retains Defence Matters within his portfolio and has delegated this responsibility to a Parliamentary Secretary within the same Ministry. The Office of the Prime Minister acts as the Ministry of Defence.

b. Defence Expenditures

Parliament exercises control over the Armed Forces of Malta through the annual Financial Estimates for the Defence, always through the Minister of Finance.

(Paragraphs 13, 22)

3. Description of:

a. Constitutional established procedures ensuring effective democratic control of the military, paramilitary, and internal security forces as well as intelligence services, and the police:

i) Armed Forces

The Malta Armed Forces Act, 1970 (Act No. 27 of 1970) is the legal instrument empowering the raising, maintenance and regulation of the Maltese Armed Forces

ii) Paramilitary Forces

Malta does not have paramilitary forces.

iii) Internal Security Forces

Malta does not have ad hoc internal security forces.

iv) Intelligence Service

The Security Service Act, 1996 - Chapter 391 of the Laws of Malta (Security Service Act), Enacted by Act. XVII of 1996 as amended by Act. XVI of 1997, is the legal instrument empowering the raising, maintenance and regulation of the Malta Security Services.

The function of the Malta Security Service, which started operating in January 2000, has been, by law, designated to be the protection of national security, in particular against threats from organised crime, espionage, terrorism and sabotage, the activities of agents of foreign powers and against actions intended to overthrow or undermine parliamentary democracy by political, industrial or violent means. It is also the function of the Service to act in the interest of the economic well being of Malta, public safety and the prevention or detection of serious crime.

The head of the Security Service is appointed by the Prime Minister and is responsible for the efficiency of the Service and for securing that no information is obtained by the service except so far as necessary for the proper discharge of its functions and that no information is disclosed by it except so far as necessary for that purpose or for the purpose of any criminal proceedings. He/she is also bound by law to ensure that the Service does not take any action to further the interests of any political party.

Members of the Security Service are appointed by the Head of Service and may, inter alia, include public officers, members employed in the armed forces of Malta, government contractors or members or employees of prescribed body or class in terms of the Official Secrets Act.

Entry, interference with property, interception or interference with communications by the Service is only lawful if authorised by a warrant issued by the Minister who is designated by the Prime Minister as being responsible for the Security Services.

A Commissioner appointed by the Prime Minister keeps the issue of warrants authorised by the Minister under review and also investigates any complaints about the Security Service. A Security Committee examines the expenditure, administration and policy of the Service.

v) Police

Legal Framework/Organisation:

The objectives of the Malta Police Force mainly stem from the Criminal Code (Article 346 to 366 of Chapter 9 and Article 4 of Chapter 164 of the Laws of Malta). These include, inter alia, the maintenance of public order and peace, the detection and apprehension of offenders and the charging and prosecution of offenders. The Police in Malta have also the duty to serve citations and summon persons to appear before the Magistrates courts.

The Malta Police Act (chapter 164 of the Laws of Malta) further empowers the Police with the enforcement of observance of all laws of the Republic. Herein it is also stated that for the performance of any of the duties carried out, the police are entitled to carry arms. The Police are also bound to work within the precepts of Human Rights guaranteed under the Constitution of Malta and the European Convention on Human Rights.

There is only one national Police Force in Malta and it is a component of the Ministry for Justice and Home Affairs. Maltese Police officers hold civil status and are not part of the military. This distinction emanates from the Constitution of Malta (Section 124(2)) which in its definition of 'public service' includes the service in the office of a member of the Malta Police Force, whilst service in the Armed Forces is not included.

The Police Force is headed by a Commissioner assisted by one Deputy Commissioner and eight Assistant Commissioners. Malta is divided administratively into two regions comprising eleven police districts and most districts are again sub-divided into divisions. Each Region is headed by an Assistant Commissioner whilst each District is headed by a Superintendent. The Division is under the administrative charge of an Inspector who keeps the Superintendent in charge of the District informed of anything which comes to his/her notice in the course of his/her duties.

Aside from the Administrative arm of the Police Force, there are special police units which include the Special Branch, the International Relations Unit, Anti-Terrorism Unit, Criminal Investigation Department, Homicide Squad, Stolen Arts Unit, the Drugs Squad, the Economic Crimes Unit, Money Laundering Unit, the Forensic Laboratory, the Vice Squad, the Mounted and Dog Section, the Traffic Section, and the Prosecution Unit.

There is also the Special Assignment Group, which consists of a number of police officers who are specially trained to deal with crisis situations such as public disturbances and terrorism. They also perform VIP escorts.

Recent policing policy has seen the set up of the Warden System which has been empowered with the execution of administrative and contraventional offences, such as traffic and Local Council by-law enforcement.

Investigative Functions:

In the exercise of their duties, the Police can affect the arrest of a person who is caught in flagrante or if the arrest is necessary to prevent the commission of offences. Every Police officer is also empowered to arrest a person who, after due warning, knowingly obstructs or disturbs the execution of police duties or disobeys lawful orders. In most other instances a Magisterial Warrant is required to effect the arrest of a person or a search in premises.

Police officers from the rank of Inspector upward have a right to search a person and/or property without a warrant:

- when there is an imminent danger that the suspect may escape or that the means proving the offence will be suppressed;
- when the suspect is detected in flagrante;
- when the intervention of the police is necessary in order to prevent the commission of further offences;
- when the entry is necessary for the execution of any warrant or order issued by a competent authority.
- where the person using the premises is already under arrest.

The police powers of search are otherwise limited by the notion of what is reasonably justifiable in a democratic society and the specific Magisterial Warrant requirements at law.

Police officers are bound to inform suspects of their right to silence. Any confession, to be admissible as evidence, must be proved to have been taken voluntarily and not under duress, coercion or with promise of favours. The burden of proving whether or not a confession is voluntary rests on the prosecution. As the law currently stands, during the investigative stage and until arraignment, the suspect does not have the right to be assisted by counsel, however he has the right (albeit conditional) of having a member of his family informed of his arrest. In the investigation of a crime, arrest is not mandatory if it is deemed sufficient to issue a summons to guarantee the suspect's appearance in court.

Supervision:

Internal supervision of the police officers is configured more or less on the traditional 'military' style hierarchy, which was exhibited until very recently by police force in England and Wales and most western police forces. It is a hierarchy based upon effective supervision and guidance in carrying out of assigned tasks of subordinates. The maintenance of discipline in the ranks is exercisable summarily by the Commissioner of Police, and in serious cases by the Public Service Commission. However, since the police are no less subject to the criminal law than any other citizen in Malta, alleged criminal and human rights violations committed by the police officers are triable and reviewed by the Criminal and Constitutional Courts respectively.

A Complaint Handling System, providing a complaint form at all Police Stations and Local Councils has been implemented. Such forms are received at the Commissioner's office, acknowledged within 3 days and referred to Internal Affairs Unit (established at Law Chapter 164), who are bound to investigate and send a further communication of results or developments within 15 days to complainant in all cases reported .

Additional administrative reviews have been implemented through the appointment of a Police Board (under chapter 164) which in effect is a board composed of non-Police members with the authority to review Police actions, both within and outside the Police Force.

In view of the fact that the Malta Police Force is answerable to the Government of the day, the House of Representatives effects further external supervision through Parliamentary Questions and by allocating discussion in connection to the allocation of funds in the Force. Furthermore, the Ombudsman has also jurisdiction to investigate certain complaints not linked with criminal investigations and court proceedings. Likewise, any member of the public may challenge the Commissioner of Police through the courts if, in his/her opinion, the police does not take any action upon any report denoting the commission of a criminal offence which has been brought to their knowledge. If the complaint is found to be justified, then the Courts may order the Commissioner of Police to initiate appropriate action. The Public may lodge complaints with the Police Board, which is regulated under the Police Act, Chapter 164 of the Laws of Malta.

b. Constitutionally established authorities/institutions responsible for the democratic control of military, paramilitary and security forces:

i) Armed Forces

As in other democratic States, the AFM are controlled and answerable to the elected Government of the day. This political control is exercised by the Prime Minister who, at present, is also the Minister responsible for the Armed Forces of Malta and who delegates most of his defence related duties to a Parliamentary Secretary in his office. Defence and security policy matters are determined by the Cabinet. All military accounts are subject to examination by the Auditor General, an independent authority responsible directly to Parliament. Besides, the parliamentary Public Accounts Committee, chaired by a member of the Opposition Party, is empowered to scrutinise all public (including all military) spending.

ii) Paramilitary Forces

Malta does not have paramilitary forces.

iii) Security Forces

Malta does not have ad hoc Security Forces.

c. Roles and missions of the military, paramilitary and security forces as well as controls to ensure that they act solely within the constitutional framework;

i) Armed Forces

The Armed Forces of Malta (AFM) is tasked to perform two defence roles:

Primary Defence Role

The AFM is responsible for the external security and integrity of the Maltese Islands in peacetime and in crisis. It is tasked with:

- Maintaining territorial integrity (particularly at the Malta International Airport and other sensitive locations);
- Maintaining integrity of Maltese waters (physical and electronic surveillance against smuggling, illegal trafficking of immigrants and law-breaking at sea)
- Providing for the limited surveillance of the Maltese Airspace;
- Providing search and rescue services in Malta and its Search and Rescue Region;
- Providing Explosive Ordnance Disposal (EOD) and Improvised Explosive Device Disposal (IEDD) cover;
- Contributing towards international peace and stability by participating in the European Union's Military Headline Goal.

Secondary Defence Role

The AFM provides military support in specified areas to the Police Force on a regular basis and to other Government Departments when required. These tasks comprise:

- Providing military assistance to Government departments and the civil community;
- Providing civil emergency protection support (explosives, marine pollution, floods and other disasters)
- Providing Military Aid to the Police and the Security Services (Internal Security, Anti-Narcotic patrols and Vehicle Check Points (VCPs));
- Providing State Ceremonial and other public duties.

ii) Paramilitary forces

Malta does not have paramilitary forces.

iii) Security forces

Malta does not have ad hoc security forces.

d. Public access to information related to the armed forces:

Public access to information on the Armed Forces of Malta is in the following manner:

- Parliamentary Questions put by members of the House of Representatives;
- Press Releases through the Department of Information in the Office of the Prime Minister;
- Official Statements in Parliament by the Prime Minister;
- An AFM Internet website (<http://www.afm.gov.mt>)
- Pursuant to a reorganization of the establishment of Headquarters AFM, the latter now employs a staff officer dedicated to informing the general public and media about the role, organization and activities of the same Armed Force.
- An AFM open-day is held at regular intervals. Participation in television programmes featuring the activities of the Armed Forces is given every importance in educating the public about the AFM.

Calls for tenders for work services and procurement of equipment are invariably published in the Malta Government Gazette, which is the Government's official publication.

(Paragraphs 20, 21, 22)

4. Stationing of armed forces on the territory of another participating State in accordance with their freely negotiated agreement as well as in accordance with international law:

Malta is not a Party to any Agreement with other participating States regarding the stationing of its armed forces on their territory. This does not exclude the taking part by military personnel in bilateral exercises on the territory of another State for very short periods.

(Paragraph 14)

5. Description of:

a. Procedures for the recruitment or call-up of personnel for service in the military, paramilitary, or security forces, if applicable;

i) Military Forces

Malta does not have military conscription. Recruitment in the Armed Forces of Malta is on an entirely voluntary basis. Calls for application are published in the Malta Government Gazette and in most local newspapers. Selection procedures differ between officers and other ranks. Applicants are required to meet literacy and numeracy requirements and to be both medically and physically fit. Recruitment in the Emergency Volunteer Reserve Force is also on a voluntary basis and is in accordance with the Emergency Volunteer Reserve Force (Appointments and Conditions of Service) Regulations, 1998. The call-out and recall of reserves is made in accordance with provisions in the Malta Armed Forces Act, 1970 (Section 32). This requires that:

'(1) If it appears to the President of Malta that national danger is imminent or that a great emergency has arisen, he may, subject to the following provisions of this section, by order signified under the hand of the Minister, authorise the calling out of any reserve force on permanent service.

(2) Where an order is made under subsection (1) of this section the occasion thereof shall forthwith be communicated to the House (of Representatives).'

ii) Paramilitary forces

Malta does not have paramilitary forces.

iii) Security forces

Malta does not have ad hoc security forces.
